Renaissance Ultrasound:

The Only Company Providing Comprehensive Ultrasound Application Training

Denver, Colo. – Healthcare providers across the US have access to ultrasound training for new or existing staff. Headquartered in Denver, Renaissance Ultrasound offers a fully registered team of ultrasonographers expert in echocardiography, vascular, OB/GYN, abdominal and small parts ultrasound. Because Renaissance Ultrasound’s clinical training team is brand specific, they cross all manufacturers and offer valuable training to physicians, equipment dealers and small ultrasound companies who require clinical application services. This service enables ultrasonographers to deliver better patient care, allows practitioners to maximize value from their ultrasound equipment investment, and provides ultrasound resellers the ability to offer system training post-sale.

“We started Renaissance Ultrasound in 2006, when we realized no one was addressing the needs of practitioners and ultrasound resellers on brand specific equipment, with comprehensive training and ‘refresher sessions’ as needed. We definitely fill a much needed niche –that’s what our clients tell us when they call!” says Renaissance Ultrasound founder and president, Leslie Patton.

Each Renaissance Ultrasound team member possesses a minimum of 10 years combined commercial and clinical experience. Each ultrasonographer is fully-registered and displays the highest degree of professionalism, expertise and customer service. What is most unique about the company is that the team is comprised of only former clinical application specialists from the ultrasound OEM (Original Equipment Manufacturer); customers are receiving the same caliber of training just at a reduced cost. This model benefits the practitioner who requires a refresher session or the reseller who needs to provide on-site system training post-sale to their customer.

“By outsourcing our customer’s training needs to Renaissance, we are able to save time and focus on what we do well - selling and servicing ultrasound equipment. It takes one phone call to Renaissance and Leslie will coordinate and dispatch a clinical applications specialist proficient with the type of system I have sold. My customers have been extremely pleased with the training, and working with Renaissance is a continuation of the quality and professionalism our company embraces” says Wave Imaging Solutions president, Nick Giarelli.

Sonography training conducted by Renaissance Ultrasound consists of on-site ultrasound training to teach staff how to maximize the features of an existing system, learn a new clinical application, or facilitate an ultrasound related research project. The team's unique qualifications of being brand specific allows on-site training of how to utilize the customer's current equipment for the types of clinical applications being performed. Renaissance Ultrasound offers half day or full day trainings, product training and phone support.

With Renaissance Ultrasound, clients benefit from more flexible, customer-oriented training that meets the changing needs of healthcare providers and equipment companies. Renaissance Ultrasound is a corporate member of the ACOG, Colorado Women's Chamber of Commerce and SDMS.

About Renaissance Ultrasound

Founded in 2006, Renaissance Ultrasound is the only outsource provider of comprehensive ultrasound application training services. Renaissance Ultrasound provides modern sonography support by offering healthcare providers access to premier clinical training on advanced ultrasound protocol and techniques. The firm offers services to Original Equipment Manufacturers (OEMs), ultrasound resellers and healthcare professionals as well as physician practices and hospitals.

Renaissance Ultrasound's certified training specialists install new or refurbished sonography systems, train new employees, and provide employee "refresher sessions" for a wide range of ultrasound equipment.
